

The Funeral Procession of Reynard the Fox.

Set forth by way of Parable, by Granny Green.

There was a Debate between certain grave Matrons, Who should have the Management of this Procession: The Candidates were Madam Bellamy, Granny Green, Mother Bell, and Mother Gersley. The City Bawds were all for Green; but those of Middlesex strongly opposed them in behalf of Gersley. At last it was unanimously agreed, That it should be put to a Vote; which was as follows, viz.

F. lamy	11
Green	14
Bell	6
Gersley	17

Bellamy finding she had lost it, demanded a Scrutiny, but it was not granted; upon which, she gave her Interest to Green, who was immediately Declared; and the Old Belam ordered the Cavalcade as follows:

First came Two Beadles, with Staves and Black Scarfs. Then came the Boys and Girls, singing de profundis. Then came Six Inferior Officers, with Mourning Beetles in their Hands.

Then Two Pursivants, bearing Pendants with the Crest of the Deceased, and his Motto in these Words, The Wicked fleeeth when no Man pursueth.

The Two-Guinea-Cuckold Belsh-ing his own Nest.

Being a very Strange, but a very, very, very True ACCOUNT of one Mr. Samuel Bear and Raggid-Staff, a Broker by the Ditchside) who agreed to give a Gentleman Two Guineas to make him a Cuckold.

T A Tavern not far from Ludgate-hill, Three Persons lately happened to meet together, viz. Mr. B---on, Mr. S---ford, and Mr. Bear and Raggid Staff. Mr. B's Wife understanding he was at the Sack-shop, sent to him for a Pint of Wine; who immediately granted her Request. Upon which Mr. S.

Discourte, and who is a noted Broker) seeing that, said, That he would oblige his Wife, did he not think like was a Whore. Upon which Mr. S. reply'd, That if she was so, he, above all Men, ought to be silent, considering the old Proverb, That tis an ill
Bird that besh--s its own nest. Mr. Raggid Staff, in a fury, reply'd, That, he was sure the was a W---, and said moreover, God d---me, she will lye with any one. Mr. S.

 upon this, asked him, Why he would live with such a Woman; Mr. Raggid Staff reply'd, It was fore against his Will, but that he was at present oblig'd to it, for fear of incurring the penalty of 7 Annas, An Act for Recruiting Her Majesties Land-Forces, and Martines, &c. He further added, That he would give Mr. S. Two Guineas, and spend One, if he would undertake to lye with her, provided it was done in a convent.

ent place where he, and one or two more Witnesses, could have an opportunity to peep and see the Action; promising withal, to bring her into his Company, and to pay all the Charges he should be at in Accomplishing the Design; thinking by this means to get a Divorce, and to cleave as cleve to another Woman, as her Husband's Tallow does to the Cotton. This needs no Explanation, the story of the Tallow Chandlers Wife being so very well known. But some time after, he repented his Bargain, pretending he was in Drink when he made it. Upon which Mr. S. Arrested him, and put him in the Compter, for the Charges he had been at in Endeavouring to make him a Cuckold.

 Bail was soon put in to the Action, and the Cause is still depending; And when it is decided, Mr. S. (as he himself informs me) designs to Attack him a second time for not performing that part of his Contract which relates to the Womans being brought into his Company.

Postscript. If I get any thing by this, it will be an Encouragement to print the Trials at large.
